Increasing Flexibility of the Civil Sector Study Graduates

Funded by: European Social Fund, OP Prague Adaptability

Period: 2010–2013

Principal Investigator: Marie Dohnalová

Project Focus: The project was focused on a curriculum innovation for the follow-up master's program under Civil Society Studies, provided as either a full-time or combined study program by the Department of Civil Society Studies, Faculty of Humanities, Charles University in Prague. The innovation aimed at increasing the flexibility, adaptability, entrepreneurship and creativity of program graduates and expanding their opportunities in the labour market.

The project brought nine new elective courses to the curriculum, created new study materials for an additional seven electives currently on offer, saw the implementation of international exchanges with our faculty going abroad on fellowships and visiting scholars coming to Charles University. There was also intensive collaboration between department graduates already professionally engaged and others working in the profession.
